Brattleboro Film Festival

The second annual Brattleboro Film Festival (BFF), which runs from November 1 to 14 at the historic, newly renovated Latchis Theatre at 48 Main Street in Brattleboro, offers 30 films that are hot right now -- dramatic features, Oscar contenders, break-out roles, compelling dramas, timely documentaries, and intelligent animation for all ages, free workshops and talks, the area premiere of six-part "Freedom and Unity: The Vermont Movie" and BFF's Green Carpet Gala to celebrate with Vermont filmmakers and friends on Sunday, November 10. BFF squeezes in as many post film discussions as possible, and they keep coming, so check the BFF website for updates and plan to arrive early as shows do sell out. See info below on how to buy passes ahead of time to avoid lines and get a discount on multiple shows.

Free Family Tax Credits Webinars from National Women's Law Center

Part I — Tax Credits: What Working Families Need to Know: Wednesday, Nov. 6, 2013, at 1:00 p.m. Eastern

Part II — Tax Credits Outreach: Tips and Tools for Advocates: Tuesday, Nov. 12, 2013, at 1:00 p.m. Eastern

Millions of dollars in available federal and state tax credits go unclaimed each year. These credits can make a huge difference for many working families struggling to make ends meet. If you work or volunteer in an organization that serves low- or middle- income families, consider participating in these free webinars to find out just how you can let families know about these valuable tax credits. Also featured will be ACA's health insurance coverage via the new health insurance marketplaces, as well as financial assistance to pay for it.

Part I — Tax Credits: What Working Families Need to Know

Wednesday, Nov. 6, 2013, at 1:00 p.m. Eastern

This webinar will cover:

- The facts about valuable state and federal tax credits for families, including:
- The Earned Income Tax Credit, which is worth up to $6,044 for low- and moderate-income families with children
- The Child Tax Credit, which is worth up to $1,000 per child
- The Child and Dependent Care Tax Credit, which gives families with child care expenses up to $2,100
- New in 2014, the Health Insurance Premium Tax Credit, which lowers the premiums for health insurance purchased through the new health insurance marketplaces under the health care law (also known as Obamacare)
- Basic tips for sharing information about tax credits with families

Part II — Tax Credits Outreach: Tips and Tools for Advocates

Tuesday, Nov. 12, 2013, at 1:00 p.m. Eastern

This webinar will provide those who work or volunteer at organizations that support low- and moderate-income families with:

- Free outreach materials
- Information to help you connect with local coalitions
- Ways to find free tax preparation services in your community
- Successful techniques for spreading the word about tax credits
- Information to help the families in your community access the new health insurance marketplaces

Register at: <http://www.nwlc.org/action/tax-credits-webinars-november-2013> These webinars are free, but participants must register separately for each webinar in advance.
